Finish Your Bachelor’s in Public Health With SDSU

With the SDSU@Cuyamaca College microsite program, you can finish your bachelor’s degree in public health without losing your connection to Cuyamaca College.

About the Program

Created by SDSU’s renowned School of Public Health and offered through SDSU Global Campus, our B.S. in Public Health degree completion program is designed to show you how to solve healthcare-related problems, communicate health strategies to diverse populations, and develop programs that will promote health equity and wellness to all members of your community. And with the option to take all your courses online, you won’t have to put your life on hold to earn your degree.

Program Highlights

- 100% online
- Designed for busy working students
- Self-paced format means you can choose to slow down with a lighter course load or speed up by taking on a heavier class load
- Complete your bachelor’s degree in as little as two years
- Same instructors who teach on-campus courses at SDSU
- Instructional assistance, such as in-person* discussions and coursework guidance at Cuyamaca College, provided by SDSU
- Financial aid available
- Exclusive access to many SDSU community programs/services
- Earn the same degree as SDSU on-campus students — a Bachelor of Science in Public Health from San Diego State University

*In-person components currently are available virtually due to COVID-19 restrictions. Once restrictions are lifted and in-person education resumes at each site, these services will be provided on your community college campus.
